Summary

Olania, a landlocked country of 15 million people, gained independence from its neighbor South Olania 20 years ago. Since the peaceful split with its neighbor, Olania has held Presidential elections every four years - typically on time and with only minor irregularities. Olania's next Presidential election, expected to be closely contested, is six months away.

Olanian elections historically center on core issues of the economy, education and healthcare. Heading into the upcoming Presidential election, these three issues remain most important to the vast majority of voters. A fourth issue, proposed reunification with South Olania, is also likely to be a hot topic during the upcoming campaign.

Who am I ?

You work for the Purple Party and the campaign of Presidential candidate Alissa Orme, who currently serves as the first female Mayor of Vario, where she enjoys a high popularity rating. Prior to becoming Mayor, she served on the local governing council. Before becoming an elected official, she worked as a low-level official at the Ministry of Justice, where she was working when a corruption scandal unfolded. The scandal implicated several top officials, but not her office directly. Even though no direct links have been made between Orme and the scandal, her opponents have used this association to cast doubt on her credibility and integrity.

Major Olanian Political Parties

GREY PARTY

- Ruling party; platform of economic justice and family values
- Presidential Candidate: Barreth Boggs (67 years old; current President of North Olania; currently polling at 40%)

PURPLE PARTY (YOU)

- Lead opposition party; platform of economic and social liberalization
- Presidential Candidate: Alissa Orme (current Mayor of Vario; polling at 55%)

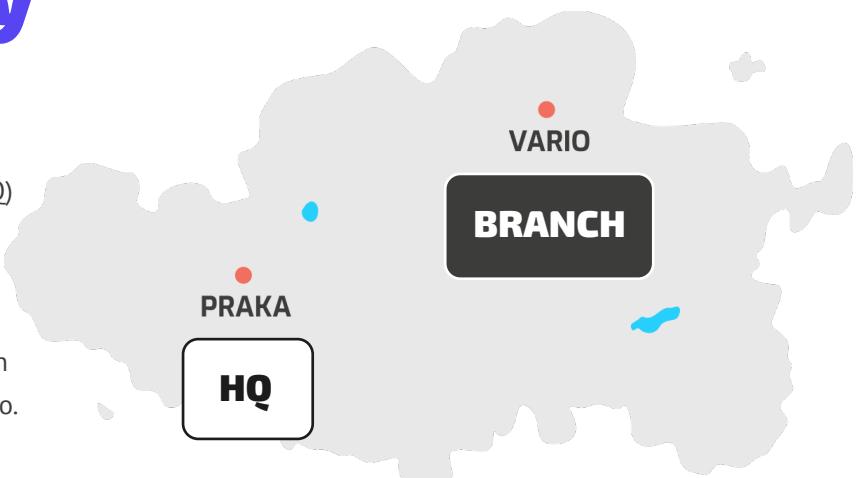

OLANIA FIRST PARTY

- Social movement-turned-political party; advocates for reunification with South Olania
- Presidential Candidate: Dani Saller (40 years old; activist turned candidate; currently polling at 5%)

Purple Party Structure

Purple Party's national headquarters office (HQ) is based in the capital of Praka. The party also has a large branch office in the second city of Vario. The party has limited funding to employ a core leadership team at the HQ; they have an even smaller team for the branch office in Vario.

What am I doing ?

As a part of Alissa Orme's campaign, the next six months (simulated over 60 minutes) gives you an opportunity to help your candidate get elected and provides an opportunity for opposing parties and potential external threat actors to disrupt your campaign. Currently polling at 55%, Candidate Orme needs to finish above 50% to win the election.

During this exercise, your campaign will have an opportunity to gain ground in the polls based upon the actions that you take, and lose ground based upon your preparation and response, or lack thereof, to events that occur. Go to the #game-materials channel and select the button for your role to read about what actions you can take during the campaign.

The Simulation

Preparing for the Campaign

Prior to the start of the campaign, you'll have 10 minutes to decide as a party how to allocate your technical campaign budget to best secure your systems. The Party budget is slim (only $6000) and you may not be able to purchase everything that you want - so choose wisely! You can see items available to purchase in the #tech-resources channel. While input from all roles is encouraged during this campaign preparation period, only the IT Team has the ability to purchase budget items in the #it-store channel (see role card). Keep in mind that the Party will be able to raise additional funds during the campaign if you wish for the IT Team to purchase other items in the budget once the campaign begins.

Running the Campaign

When ready (or prompted by a Facilitator), move to the Headquarters Video or Branch Video channel, depending upon your role. Over the course of the campaign, you can:

RESPOND TO EVENTS

TAKE ACTIONS

PURCHASE ITEMS

Respond to events that occur during the campaign to protect your polling position

- Respond in #hq-events or #branch-events channel via the thread created for the relevant event
- Remember: You can lose % if vulnerabilities in campaign structure, systems and approaches are exploited

Take actions specific to your role (see role card) to improve polling % or raise funds

- Take actions through the #initiate-actions channel (click your role button, select action, follow prompt)
- Check #actions-status for approval, and be alert for actions initiated by others that may require your participation!

Purchase additional technical systems or policies from the budget (if funds exist)

- These actions must be initiated by the IT Team via the #purchase-items channel

Reflecting on the Campaign

After the campaign - win or lose - you will walk through the story of the wide range of problems the Orme campaign faced, and reflect on what the team did well and what could have been improved.

Remember: your responses, actions, and purchases will not count unless they meet the requirements for the given action on your Role Card.

Purple Party Technical Assets

The Purple Party has some important technical assets that it will need to use during the upcoming campaign. These systems - and their status - will be displayed in the #scoreboard channel in Discord during the campaign.
